Production Position in Stone Fabrication

ACSENT is looking for production workers in it's fabrication department for limestone and granite works. Past experience in stone fabrication is not necessary as we will train the right candidate. Work experience in other related trades is welcome.

Work produced by ACSENT includes: stonework for architectural veneers; landscape items and features for outdoor settings; stone, glass and metal signage; and memorial works for residential, commercial, civic and religious projects. All work is custom designed and produced to customer specifications for individual, corporate, institutional and government clients.

Daily tasks include: cutting, grinding, milling, shaping and engraving of building stones including limestone, granite and marble for architectural, interior and exterior surfaces and settings. Qualified candidates will be responsible for the layout of projects for production; for manual and machine fabrication of designs and drawings; and for material movement and handling. Work will be performed mainly in our facility, however, installation and on-site work may also be required from time to time. Likewise, maintenance and upkeep on our equipment and facility will be needed regularly.

Individual skills needed include: the ability to read shop drawings and measure and layout designs; the capacity to work with hand-tools and other devices; and a familiarity with the operation of automated equipment including saws, grinders and milling machines. The ability to operate a fork-lift is needed. Some heavy lifting may be required from time to time. A valid driver's license is also necessary.

Personal characteristics desired include: the ability to work on one's own with limited supervision; the ability to read and follow technical drawings; and the ability to think creatively to find solutions for unique and custom applications.

Salary will be based on experience and background. Benefits include health insurance and holiday and vacation pay.

Please send your information and history to the Contact page on our website. Thank you for considering working with ACSENT.
